Overview

Communication has been of critical significance for educators. Despite its complex and perennially evolving dimensions, communication has proved to be vital for academics in fine-tuning the contours of their scholastic practices. Today’s educators need to be constantly striving towards the acquisition and upgradation of a variety of communicative prowess encompassing language skills, socio-linguistic aptitude, discourse competence, socio-cultural adeptness, and strategic competence.

The Faculty Development Programme is designed to foster an ever-evolving communicative competence among educators in higher education leading them towards grounded academic practices.
